Suburb Profile

Wongawallan, QLD 4210, is a scenic rural locality nestled in the Gold Coast hinterland, approximately 25 km from Surfers Paradise and around 68 km southeast of Brisbane. It is known for its mountainous terrain, lush greenery, and peaceful lifestyle that appeals to families and professionals seeking a tranquil setting with space and privacy. With a population of approximately 1,415 residents and a median age of 43, Wongawallan has a strong owner-occupier community, with over 87% of homes owned outright or with a mortgage. Most households are families, and a large proportion are professionals, reflecting a semi-rural yet aspirational lifestyle.

Wongawallan is surrounded by natural beauty, including Wongawallan Creek and Mount Wongawallan, which rises to 378 metres. Around 69% of the land is zoned for rural use, and over 22% is designated for conservation, contributing to its serene, low-density character. A network of parks and reserves, such as Wongawallan Reserve, Tamborine Creek Reserve, and the Wongawallan Conservation Area, support a lifestyle of outdoor recreation, bushwalking, and wildlife appreciation.

There are no schools directly within Wongawallan, but nearby suburbs provide access to quality education, including Upper Coomera State College and Tamborine Mountain schools. Residents also enjoy local attractions such as the Fox and Hounds Country Inn, a unique English-themed pub with authentic decor imported from the UK, offering a distinct local dining experience.

Overall, Wongawallan offers a quiet, nature-focused lifestyle with spacious living, ideal for families, retirees, and professionals wanting a retreat from urban density while remaining connected to the conveniences of the Gold Coast.
